Changing Landscapes: Pathways Through Participation

Pathways through Participation was a two-and-a-half year research project that aimed to improve our understanding of how and why people participate, how their involvement changes over time, and what pathways, if any, exist between different activities. The project was funded by the Big Lottery Fund. It started in April 2009 and finished in November 2011 - <http://pathwaysthroughparticipation.org.uk>

Each project has a landing page with some basic details of the project and a link to any relevant project web site. If we scroll down, we can see the cases associated with this project in the archive.

rites Help

RO: No I still see 'em.

MOTHER: They come here and see him.

RO: Ah [remembering more friends to add] ... @@male friends 34 and 35## ...

SW: So most of your friends here are boys aren't they?

RO: Yeah, some of them are with girls.

SW: A few of them are with girls. So would you say your friendships with boys are different with your friendships with girls?

RO: No, they are both the same actually.

SW: You talk about the same kinds of things?

RO: Yeah.

SW: Do you hang around in a big group then?

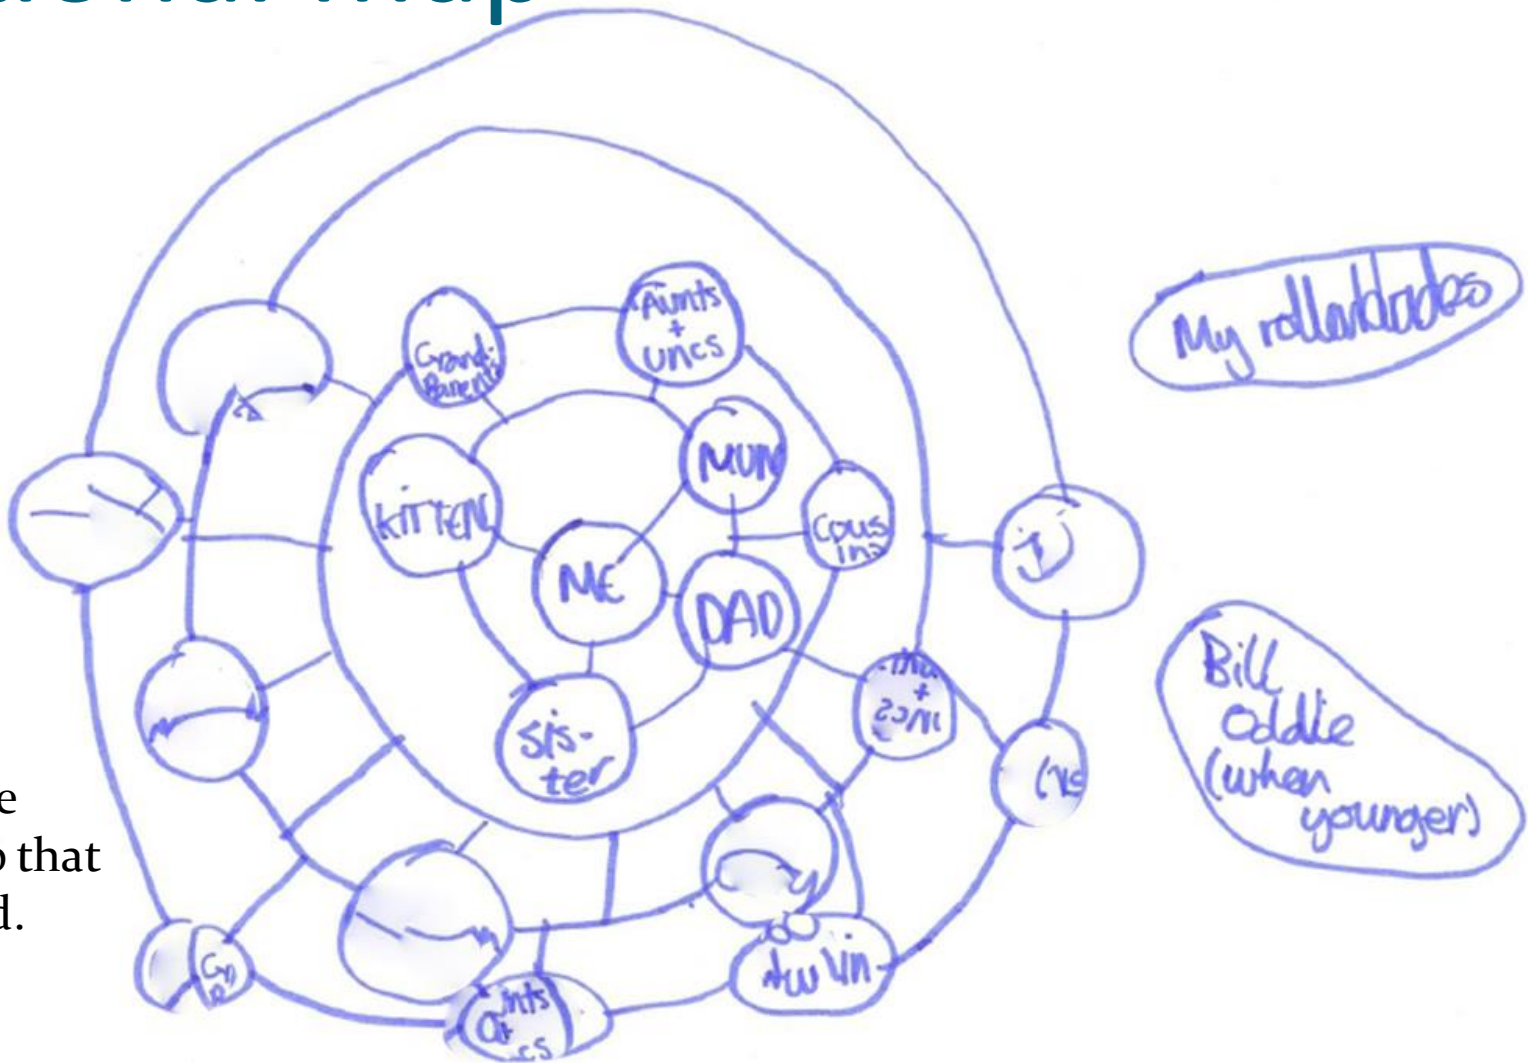

RO: Only on buses after school.

SW: So how many of these friends come round now then ... most of them?

RO: Loads of them.

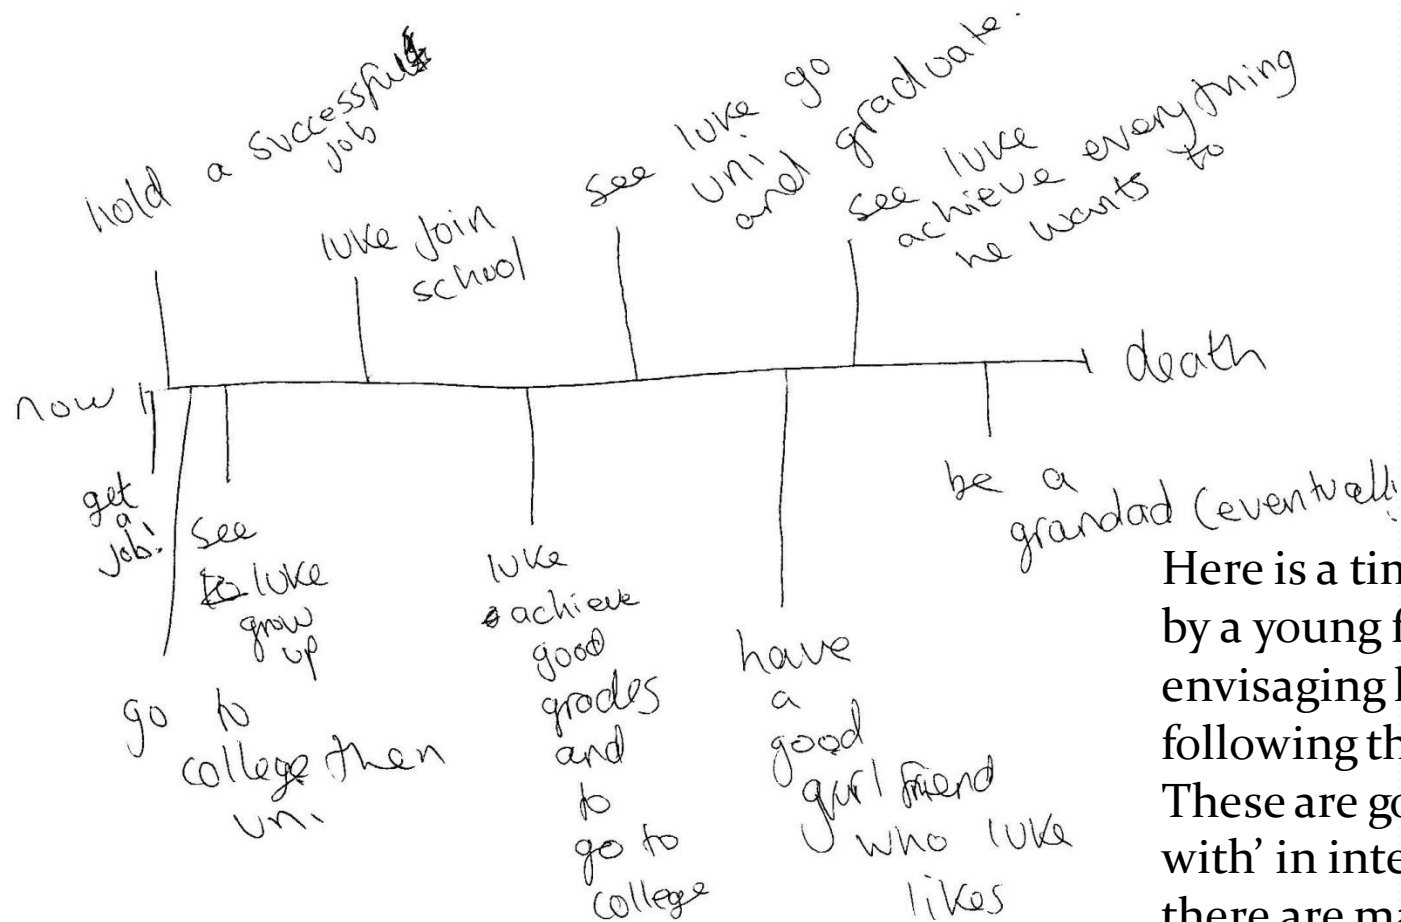

This is a teenager talking about his friendship groups, while he constructs a relational map showing who is important in his life.

Relational map

And here is the relational map that he constructed.

Timeline

Here is a timemap constructed by a young father, who is envisaging his future life following the arrival of his son. These are good 'tools to think with' in interview settings and there are many such timemaps in the archive

Future essay

I have finished my medicine course at Edinburgh University, and am now training to be a forensic pathologist. I have a little green car, which I use to get around. I live in a small flat with a good friend. In the evenings, I read, do work related to my training, and take Catalan classes. Occasionally, when my friend is out, I play my clarinet. Eventually, I will finish my course and move to Barcelona. I email old school friends every now and then, and they update me with their lives. I am still writing stories, in spiral bound notebooks, which litter the floor and the desk as we keep it in good

This is an essay created by a 15 year old who was asked to envisage her life at the age of 25. From her interviews we know that this is a realist picture of her aspirations and likely trajectory over time. Several projects in the archive have used this technique - and the essays and associated interview transcripts make fascinating reading.

Volunteering search

I was going to say, it's funny because I've worked on and off and everything. Like when I hadn't worked, I've got to say this, I've never claimed any benefits or anything, well I just don't work, my husband does all that and supports me. But we are a very volunteering family. @@husband## doesn't do much because he says that I do it all. @@daughter## my daughter does a bit, but not too much, she's more like her dad. But @@son##'s done a fair bit, not always like charities and that, I mean he has done volunteering for one @@cancer## thing, which I think it was a race or something, he was one of the marshals. He's done a bit for that, but he's also done volunteering for sports events and things like that.

So you've passed it on to your kids?

Yeah, I think I've passed it more onto @@son##. @@daughter##'s more into working and earning money like @@daughter##, but @@son##'s more like me, he'd rather do things like that.
